

Monitoring babies during labour: What are the issues for pregnant women and their health professionals?

Tuesday 17 October, The Studio, Birmingham

A one day conference for anyone involved in maternity care including health professionals and students, commissioners, managers, parent reps, Maternity Voices Partnerships and MSLC members.

The University of Birmingham and NCT have organised this event to explore the implications of the recently published INFANT trial of decision support for intrapartum fetal monitoring.

The day will include:

- The latest news from the INFANT trial
- A summary of recent NICE guidance and findings from the MBBRACE programme
- Consideration of the implications for clinical practice, for women and their families, and for future research

There are free places available for user reps and NCT practitioners and members interested in maternity services and research.
